

READY-MADE CLOTHING.

How vast, expansive, and progressive are the industrial resources of this great country, how few, even of those who might be supposed to keep pace with its rapid strides. The Politician stumping some election district, wondering what gain he will get over his victorious rival, and thinks or wonders that all the world is not astounded at his rural greatness, sent forth to shine for the day, in some legislative hall. Many look with astonishment to find that they are mere things comprising but a moiety of the vast machinery of human power and greatness, that they are not the sole levers that its power moves on uninterrupted by any jarring of its lesser power. We see the plow driven by industry and thrift; those fields springing up in rich verdure where but yesterday the forest held its shadowy sway; villages starting up like magic; the iron girdle spreading its vast way over coming space, bringing the products of the but yesterday's distant forest to be wafted to foreign climes. What mind can take in this greatness? who keep pace with its strides. What resources of industry, mighty beyond comparison, taxing the credulity of the most progressive minds! May we be pardoned for mentioning but one department of this vast human treasury of labor—that of ready-made clothing.

This branch of industry, but a few short years ago was scarcely worth the notice of passing glance, now has assumed one of the most important stands in the vast exchange, disbursing more capital to industrious laborers, employing in its vast manufactories greater number of operatives than any other branch of industry. Take but the city of New York, who will credit us when we give some of the few details. Handford & Brother, four thousand five hundred hands and forty cutters; Brook & Brother twenty cutters two thousand five hundred hands; J. W. Lewis & Co., three thousand; Close & Smith two thousand; D. & J. Devlin, a very extensive manufactory. These are but some of the leading houses in that city. In Philadelphia there are also extensive houses. Gause, Lerhman & Co., thirty-five hundred, Bennet & Co., two thousand, besides many others too numerous to mention. In Baltimore—Cole, Noah Walker and many others, who work as many hands as many of the large houses. And lastly we come down to our city, which has of latter years been keeping pace with the progress of the times; and keeping in view that this is a city of but comparatively a few years old, it can boast of as much custom as any of the sister cities.—In this same department of industry might be mentioned, Wall and Stevens, of this city, the largest Clothing Manufacturers in the District, employing from ninety to one hundred hands, (and would employ many more but for the scarcity of labor,) benefiting our city by employing our own citizens, and producing goods as low in price as any establishment north of the same quality, excepting the very common and low price goods, which, from the large and surplus population of northern cities, can be made at lower prices there, but for better quality, wages are equal.—We are pleased to see that within the last few years merchandise of every kind is sold in this market as low as in any of the other cities, and the supply and sales equal in all respects.

It may be asked by some what pay have this vast concourse of human labor receive for this work; whether they are benefitted by its expansive and growing resources, we may say that they are; that much has been said of their destitution and low price given for their labor; but it is not true in all cases. Great numbers apply for work who are entirely incompetent—who are not fit for the business of tailors or tailoresses; and it is well known that the employers suffer in consequence if compelled through necessity to keep them. Their wages, of course, must be commensurate to their services—indigent females, seeking employment by their needles, whose only knowledge is in making the simple article of shirts and drawers, and who never were intended for even that simple employment; and we risk nothing in saying that their is not one in ten who is entirely competent to do the work required in a clothing manufactory of good quality; and this applies to both sexes. Thus it is that employers are often considered as oppressive, and acting unjustly in payment of wages; but this is not the case. As a general thing, (although there may be exceptions,) those hands who are competent to do the work promptly, can obtain good wages and constant employment, and are always at a premium. The fault lies not entirely in the employer—it is in the power of those females who seek employment by their needle to make themselves entirely competent by learning it as a profession; but how often is it that we see parents bringing up their sons and daughters in idleness, either through a false pride or the fear of a few who look down on honest labor as a thing too degrading, but forget that they themselves are supported often at the cost of the laboring community. But it is well that this class are few, for we must be a working people, no privilege class, no aristocracy of birth, although there may be a few whose pride may boast of a proud ancestral line, but they must give place to those of but yesterday, whose enterprise and industry places them far in advance of ancient sages, sears and dames, whose only hereditary is that they never done anything but this; do nothing we hope is fast disappearing from our midst. How much better would it be for them to be taught the practical and useful branches of industry, than the continued twang of a hired piano, or the working of trashy embroidery—things worthless in the hands of those who can never use them or gain any benefit by their acquirements. S.

The Uses of Advertising.

We have daily illustrations of the benefits of advertising in the News, but a little incident, which occurred within a day or two past, while it demonstrates the efficiency of our large and general circulation in the dissemination of advertisements, is so pleasant in itself that we cannot refrain from making a note of it.

A gentleman, while in the street, lost his watch-chain and the "establishment" attached. The chain was composed of the handsomely braided hair of a dear relative. In the seal was an excellent miniature daguerreotype likeness of his aged mother, and attached were several valuable rings and "chains," &c., presents and keepsakes from friends and relatives. Of course, no price could have purchased the chain and its "attachments" and the loss was regarded by the owner as a serious calamity. He wisely determined to advertise it in the Morning News. The result was, that on the second day after the appearance of the advertisement we had the satisfaction of receiving it from the hands of an honest negro who had picked it up in the street. The boy on finding it had shown it to his master, who, on seeing the advertisement in the News, directed his servant where to carry it. The gentleman was duly notified of the recovery of his property, at which he was, of course, highly delighted. On recovering the chain he left with us a five dollar bill with which to reward the honesty of the faithful black, and departed practically convinced of the expediency of advertising.

Mr. —, (rapidly changing the subject.) "Yes, yes! beautiful, beautiful! but see, love, what a magnificent brown horse, and how splendidly that fellow sits him!"

"Dey does say, dat way down in Ga. dey make poor nigga work twenty-five hours ebra day. Now look heah, I've been told a day hasn't got no more nor twenty-four hours."

"Mighty, what ignoramuses nigga you is, Scipio; why, way down dar, dey make poor nigga get up one hour afore day,—doesn't dat make 'em twenty-five?"

A credulous clown went to the clergyman of his parish, and told him with great consternation that he had seen a ghost.

"Where did you see it?"

"Why," said Diggory, "as I war agoing, an' please your reverence, by the church, right up against the wall I sees the ghost."

"In what shape did it appear?"

"For all the world like a great ass."

"Go home and hold your tongue," replied the clergyman; "you are a timid creature, and have been frightened at your own shadow."

INAUGURATION OF THE EQUESTRIAN STATUE OF ANDREW JACKSON.

The Equestrian Statue of General Jackson will be inaugurated on the eighth day of January next, when the arrangements will be as follows:

All those either specially or generally invited, will assemble in front of the City Hall at 10 o'clock a. m., on the eighth of January, 1853.

Colonel GEORGE W. HUGHES, a member of the Jackson Monument Committee, has been selected as chief marshal, and will appoint his own aids.

The military escort, consisting of the Regiment of Volunteers of the Militia of the District of Columbia, with such detachments from the Army and Marine Corps as may be within convenient distance, and the Military Companies from other cities who may attend, will be under the command of Colonel William Hickey.

The procession will be formed as follows:

- Military Escort.
- The Jackson Monument Committee.
- Clark Mills, Artist.
- Hon. Stephen A. Douglas, Orator.
- Chaplains of Congress.
- President of the United States and Cabinet.
- Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, with their officers.
- Judges of the Supreme Court.
- Judges of other Courts.
- The Commander-in-Chief of the Army, and oldest Commodore in the Navy of the United States.
- Officers of the Army and Navy.
- Corporate Authorities of Washington, Georgetown, and Alexandria.
- The Jackson Democratic Association.
- Other organized Societies.
- Citizens of Washington and other places.

The procession will move at as early an hour as possible, down Four-and-a-half street to Pennsylvania avenue, thence up said avenue, on the most direct route, to Lafayette square.

At the Monument the ceremonies will be as follows:

- Prayer by the Chaplain of the Senate.
- Address by the Hon. S. A. Douglas.
- Unveiling the Statue.
- Military present Arms.
- National Salute.
- Benediction by Chaplain of the House.

The Jackson Democratic Association, fraternities of Free and Accepted Masons, Odd-Fellows, and Red Men, Temperance Societies, and all other organized societies in the District, and the citizens generally, are earnestly and respectfully invited to be present at the ceremonies of the occasion.

WASHINGTON, December 30, 1852.

REGIMENTAL HEADQUARTERS OF VOLUNTEERS, Washington, Dec. 30, 1852.

In accordance with an invitation received from the Committee of Arrangements for the "Inauguration of the Equestrian Statue of General Andrew Jackson" on the 8th day of January next, the Regiment of Volunteers will assemble on the usual parade ground, in front of the City Hall, at nine o'clock A. M. on that day, for which the officers commanding companies will give the necessary orders.

The occasion in an especial manner invites the cheerful co-operation of the military, since it directs the attention of the American people to the erection of a statue to endure for ages commemorative of the genius and valor of a soldier whose extraordinary deeds in arms were even surpassed by his ardent love of the country, so well illustrated by his memorable declaration, which is now, and will ever remain a watchword with every friend of his country:

"The Union must be preserved!"

MASON'S PATENT PURIFIED Sperm Oil.

This oil, for brilliancy, durability, and purity as a light, and for lubricating purposes, whether applied to the delicate works of a watch or the most ponderous machinery, surpasses any oil now known. It is warranted not to gum, being entirely deprived of that substance, which so seriously impedes the rapid movement of all kinds of machinery; and for burning it is cheaper and better than any oleaginous substance now in use. While it affords a light superior to gas or camphine, it is also free from the dangerous explosive quality of the latter, being solely sperm oil purified. So pure is this oil that it will not freeze at any degree of cold known within the limits of the United States; having thereby in this, as in every other particular, an advantage over the best sperm oil as now used. After devoting many years in experimenting with the various oils, for the purpose of overcoming their impurities as at present fabricated, the undersigned assures the public that he has succeeded in producing the "ne plus ultra" of oils. He offers it as superior to any known oil in the world, for the purposes of burning and lubricating, and invokes the scientific of all countries to test it and pronounce their opinion satisfied that all will agree that it is the finest oil ever offered for sale. A CHEAP AND GOOD FAMILY PAPER.

THE WEEKLY PENNSYLVANIAN
Is published by Wm. H. HORN, at 78 South Third street, Philadelphia, at the low price of ONE DOLLAR A YEAR.

This Journal will contain each week, Twenty-eight long columns of choice reading matter, comprising original and selected Poetry, Tales, Political and Literary articles, News, both Foreign and Domestic, the proceedings of Congress and our State Legislature, and a full and complete Weekly Summary of the state of the Philadelphia Markets. In fact, the WEEKLY PENNSYLVANIAN will contain everything calculated to make it an acceptable FAMILY VISITOR.

To those who have been in the habit of reading the PENNSYLVANIAN, it is unnecessary to say this Journal will maintain the reputation it has hitherto borne as a National paper, freely and boldly defending the Constitution and the Union against the attacks of the fanatics of the North and the disunionists of the South. The cardinal principles of the Democratic Party will be maintained in all their freshness, vigor, and purity; and no departure from our cherished doctrines, winked at, or innovation tolerated.

It has been our continued effort to make the Democratic masses a reading people, and we are pleased to find that they are becoming more and more so every day. But our desire is to make them still more studious.

Our Democratic friends throughout the Union, are called upon to aid in increasing the already wide circulation of the WEEKLY PENNSYLVANIAN; by so doing, they will not only be helping us, but also aiding in circulating Democratic truths that will produce a glorious result. That our readers may be persuaded to help us, we offer the following inducements:

Local Affairs.

This morning was just such an one as is desired by persons having out-door business to attend to. Clear, cool, and well calculated to make one step quick.

While some children were playing in the lumber yard of Mr. Lemmon on 12th street, last Sunday, one of them fell from a pile and broke his leg in two places near the ankle. We have not learned the little sufferer's name.

The ladies in the Eastern part of the city are about opening a fair on the Navy Yard, for the purpose of raising money to be devoted to some charitable purpose. It is so seldom that calls for assistance are made from that section of our city, that we hope the fair venders may be very liberally patronized.

The National Theatre was not so crowded last night as it was during the week previous. The Bateman children are certainly very smart, and their performances may pay for awhile; but we think that child's play will not interest our citizens very long. The engagement of these children is good evidence of the intention of the proprietor to give us a sight of all the stars, no matter what their magnitude.

PANORAMA.—This painting meets with universal approbation, and those who visit once are desirous to witness it again. Crowds of fashionable audiences during the past week have thronged the hall with enthusiastic delight. All must acknowledge its unparalleled perfections.

Some sailors belonging to the Fulton, now at the Navy Yard, came ashore last night and went to the theatre, where, not behaving themselves as they ought to have done, were arrested and taken to the watch house. This morning they were let off by paying for the actual cost of their detention, the captain thinking the punishment they would receive on board ship sufficient.

Edward Miller was again arrested yesterday morning, and held to bail to keep the peace.

The body of a man found drowned near Georgetown was last evening conveyed to the city burial ground for interment.

In the Criminal Court yesterday the following cases were disposed of viz.

Negro Robert Williams, tried for an assault; not guilty. Negroes, John Reed, Abram Smoliet, Jas. Bowie were found guilty of rioting, and Wm. Better; not guilty.

Negro Lemuel Beckert, found guilty of an assault on Mr. Wm. H. Langley, was sentenced to three months in the county jail, and ten dollars fine.

Negro Benjamin Cooper, was found guilty of assault and battery.

The only person in the watch house last night besides the sailors, was a young man named John Ennis, charged with assault and battery; he gave bail to appear in court. A companion of his, who struck Mr. Hilton on the head with a stone, has not been arrested.

Take Notice.—Are you dry or hungry? If so, why call at UNCLE JEMMY where the best fried oysters can be had as well as oyster soup. His oyster and other pies are hard to beat, and the manner in which his beststeaks, chops, &c. are cooked is a caution to the hungry. His ale is of superior kind. Our stand takes lodgers, furnishes meals at short notice at any time from 7 o'clock A. M. until 11 P. M. Suppers can be had for respectable ladies and gentlemen. He keeps a civil, quiet, and genteel house. dec 28—1w UNCLE JEMMY'S FRIEND.
